After deliberating all yesterday the National League baseball magnates reached a definite nelusion at midnight. Eleven clubs signed an agreement by which the circuit is reduced to eight clubs. Freedman was absent, but his representative, I red Knowies, was there. He received no authority, however, to put the club on record, but from what was said by his friends Freedman will sign the agreement this morning.

A compromise was effected by which all fou retiring clubs will receive pretty nearly what they have asked for. It was learned that Louisville will get $10,000; Cieveland, $15,000; Baltimore about $30,000, and will sell all of its players later, The Washington club retires for $35. 000, but all of the players will go to the League. The climax was the result of a willingness to break ground on the part of Freedman, Brush and Soden who have been holding out against these prices for some time past It can be seen, therefore, that the Brooklyn-Baltimore syndicate has won quite a victory and that Freedman did not succeed in carrying everything before him.

As soon as Freedman signs the agreement it will be up to him immediately to strengthen the New York team. The Brooklyn club will add De Montreville, McGinnity, Kitson and Sheekard to its list. McGraw and Robinson of Baltimore are wanted by several clubs in case Freedman refuses to buy them. The magnates were in a very happy frame of mind after adjourning and said that everything would be settled to-day.

The President of the New York Club was the real stumbling block when the weary delegates crawled into bed Wednesday He had notified the Circuit Committee that either an eight-club circuit must be established or the present twelve-club arrangement would have to be maintained. He insisted that a ten-club circuit was out of the question and also declared that the prices asked for the withdrawal of Baltimore, Washington, Cleveland and Louisville were entirely too high. In fact Freedman was quoted as saying that he was in favor of having the League give up the sum of $20,000 to be divided among the owners of the four clubs. This was a staggering blow to every magnate except Soden and Brush, both stockholders in the New York Club, and, as THE SUN stated yesterday morning, the negotiations were effectually blocked when the magnates woke up and went to breakfast.

But things were being done in the lobby that were expected to offset such acrisis and it soon became noised about that the Freedman "combine," composed of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Cincinnatiand Louisville, had been met by another pastify formed alliance, consisting of Brooklyn, Baltimore, Chicago, St. Louis, Cleveland and Washington, This showed some clever politics and bored the Boss to indulge in careful reflection. Six against six and everything tied up! The cracking of the whip up in Fifth Avenue was not so filled with terror for the club owners and several of the matually buffed out their chests. A crisis had been reached and something had to be done. Conant of Boston soon got into a cab with Freedman and while they were driven downtown the situation was talked over. This didn't look much as if Freedman had had a row with Conant, who is one of the best-natured men in the League and a peacemaker. While this was going on the National Board of Arbitration, which lineludes all the members of the circuit Committee—Brush, Hart, Rogers and Soden—together with Bobison and Young, went into session and did not adjourn for three hours. It was announced that several minor League disputes of no especial interest had been decided. Then the League as a boly convened, with the following delegates present:

New York, Fred Rowles; Boston, A. H. Sowden, W. H. Conant and J. B. Billings; Brooklyn, F. A. Abell and C. H. Ebbets, Philadelphia, A. I. Resch and John T. Brush; Pittsburg, Bernard Dreyfusal and W. W. Kerr, Lonisville, Harry Pulllam; St. Louis, Frank De Hass Robson; Cleveland, Stanley Botson.

that the League pay a uniform price for four franchises.

After showing what was coming Brush be-gan to take un each of the four clubs in turn. He said that the committee had experienced no trouble with Louisville and recommended that $10,000 be paid for that franchise. Before Brush could proceed further there was a blockno trouble with Louisville and recommended that $10,000 be paid for that franchise. Before Brush could proceed further there was a blockade, and, on motion to take a recess, the magnates went down into the corridors. Hanlon, representing the Brooklyn-Baltimore syndicate, whispered something in Brush's ear and in a few minutes the Circuit Committee went into another rubber-shoe session. That was proof positive that Brush had been throwing out a feeler and had caught a crab.

The Wagners, who own the Washington Club, with their attorney, Judge Frank Elliott of Philadelphia, were soon called before the Circuit Committee and asked for their final terms. They said that they had never shanged their original offer, $46,500, for everything to deduct from this emount $7,000, which they had received from the Boston Club for players Dinsen, Freeman and Barry.

"It is a simple business proposition, gentlemen!" said Judge Elliot. "If you want to buy us out we will sell everything for $39,000, and not a dollar less. If you do not want to buy and this figure, the Washington Club is willing to assume aif risks by remaining in a twelve-club circuit until the ten years' agreement expires in 1801. Sentiment does not enter into this matter at al."

The committee pulled and hauled to no avail. It was suggested that the Wagners take something for their franchise after turning over their lease or grounds to the League, with the additional privilege of selling their players within sixty days. The Wagners, who are up to League shuff, couldn't see this at all and wouldn't hadge.

AT THE SPORTSMEN'S SHOW. Columbia and Old Penn Fail to Score at

Water Polo.

There was a new exhibit in an obscure cor ner of Madison Square Garden that fooled hundreds who attended the Sportsmen's Show yesterday. A big cage which contained a tigress and her cub was ostentatiously labelled: "Do not feed or annoy the animals," At one time a shiver ran through the crowd as a daring young man put his hand through the bars and affectionately stroked the cub. Instead of springing at the offender, the tigress lay placidly, contemplating a piece of raw meat. Then it dawned upon the spectators of the incident that they were victims of the taxidermist's skill and that the apparently wild anima's were merely stuffed specimens.

Many rumors were circulated during the day of the chase and capture of the mysterious wildcat that is supposed to have existed for days under the Arena boxes. According to one report, the cat was clubbed so severely that it is now unfit for show purposes, and Headkeeper McDonald said with authority.

The cat is dead, so far as the show goes. The trap shooters were in better form than ever, and as a result the best previous garden records were broken in the continuous and association championships. C. W. Budd proved a surprise in the continuous event. He has not been at the head of either contest hitherto, but vesterday morning was dead on the targets and shattered 70 in succession.

W. R. Crosby was the hero in the champion ship event. He missed his thirty-fourth target, but after that his aim was unerring and he finished his 100 shots without another mistake. Additional interest was taken in the work of E. D. Fulford and J. Fanning, as they were shooting off a tie in Wednesday's match. Fulford came out in the lead, smash-ing 94 to Fanning's 10. The chief feature of the aquatic programme was a water polo game between Columbia and University of Pennsylvania. E. C. Schaffer, the champion swimmer, did not play on the latter team, and this equalized matters, so that neither side scored and the game will be played over again to-night.

The absence of Schaffer rendered the fifty-yard Metropolitan championship race a gift for the Knickerbocker contingent and the four contestants in the final heat were members of that club. Miller was quickest getting into his stroke and had a sight advantage at the turn which he maintained to the finish, winning by a yard from Buddy, who proved a surprise in beating the Reeder brothers. On the Twenty-seventh street side of Madison Square Garden a miniature putting green and a tee, with a net to catch the flying balls, has been arranged. This golf inclosure is crowded from morning to night by ardent players and they keep up their practice shots even while the water footballists are splashing about in a thrilling finish. Alexander Finley, the Newark A. C. professional, at present holds the putting record with a score of out of a possible 9. "Turf is certainly permanent grass," writes C. B. Maccionald in a letter from Chicago, "and a club may be soled on it in a hazard." Turf under the new rules in a hazard must be considered as part of the fair green. High grass is not a hazard, but if in a hazard there should be some struggling high grass, Mr. Macdonald would call that part of the hazard, if it was not permanent grass. Hazards, he adds, are now clearly defined, except that in this country the clearly defined, except that in this country the word "bunker" is indiscriminately applied to all hazards. LONDON, March 8.-The Duke of Westminster's noted horse. Flying Fox. the winner of the Derby, the St. Leger, the Two Thousand Guineas and mony other races, has been sold to Monsieur Blane. The price paid was 37,500 guineas. Some of the other horses that brought sub-

Goblet, 5,000 guineas; Manchuria, 4,300 guineas; Good Luck, 2,100 guineas, and Vane. 900 guineas. The price paid for Flying Fox is more than double the previous record price paid for a racehorse a public sale. The bidding was confined to S. B. Joel, Baron Blane and R. P. Gilpin, the letter, it being understood, acting in behalf of Mr. William C. Whitney, American ex-Secretary of the Navy. Mr. Joel dropped ont at £34,000. Mr. Gilpin and Baron Blane competed with £500 bids until the record price

When his grandsire, Ormonde, was brought to this country some years ago, there were doubts expressed as to whether "the horse of the century" was worth the $150,000 paid for him by W. O'B. Macdonough of California. Ormonde had then seen his best days and the investment created a sensation among horsemen. He had been practically discarded by the late Duke of Westminster as a "roarer," and his record at the stud in the Arrentine Republic did not seem to justify the price paid for him by the Western millionaire.

Before leaving England however, O-monde had sired Orme, and the latter, in turn, produced Flying Fox, who subsequently became the greatest three-year-old racing abroad. It is thought, however, that his new owner will retire him to the stud without risking his prestige in a further campaign. According to the English racing critics it was the general wish that Flying Fox would be bid in by a representative of the young Duke, or by some other native who would have him trained for the Ascat cup. England will undoubtedly be sorry to lose him, as there was a wild clamor when Ormonde was allowed to go, and the latter's ideal representative is Flying Fox.

Flying Fox's price, flagured out in American money, amounted to $191,018.44, and this naturally overshadowed the bids for his stable-mates.

Caiveley, who brought the next highest price to Flying Fox, is the noted five-year-old by St. Serf-Sandiway. According to the Field, "He goes fast, stays well, and would be invaluable as a schoolmaster, to say nothing of stud value when he has done with racing. He is in the Ascot Cup, and though he is not like yo beat Flying Fox, should the latter run, he is just the sort to take the Alexandra Plate. He is further engaged in the Metropolitan and the Chester and Ensom cups, and his capabilities may be easily judged when it is noted that he is the top weight in each of the handicaps."

Gobiet is a promising three-year-old by Grey Leg-Rissing Cup. He showed good form outside the stake class last year and is regarded as a comer. Manchuria's value is accounted for by the fact that she is by Orme-Gauntiet. Good Luck is a gelding, but his racing record as a three-year old last season justifies his price. A singular feature of the sale was that the three-year-old Vane, a full sister to Flying Fox, was let go for 900 guineas. This filly was looked upon as a possible winner of the Oaks this year. Herentry is now void, however, but she has an engagement in the Esher Stakes at Sandown. In discussing the breeding of Flying Fox, and his noted progenitors, the Field furnished the following details of interest:

"For not more than five-and-twenty years was the Duke before the public, either as a breeder or an owner; but during the last quarter of a century that wonderful male succession of Bend Or, Ormonde, Orme, and Flying Fox were

was the Duke before the public, either as a breeder or an owner; but during the last quarter of a century that wonderful male succession of Bend Or, Ormonde, Orme, and Flying Fox were breitn the Eaton paddocks, while the Derby was won four times, the St. Leger twice, the Two Thousand four times, and the One Thousand once by bearers of the yellow jacket and black can. Curiously enough, it is generally some wonderful mare who founds the fortunes of a successful stud, but in the Duke of Westminster's case the present Eaton stud is chiefly indebted to a sire for its great achievements, and in years to come the names of Doucaster. Bend Or, Ormonde, Orme and Flying Fox will be more associated with the Duke than any of the mares that carried his colors or threw him great winners.

be more associated with the Duke than any of the mares that carried his colors or threw him great winners.

"In his first year at the stud Doncaster begat Bend Or, who won for the Duke his first Derby, and who, in his first season of paddeck life, sired Ormonde, thought by many to be the greatest horse of modern times. The latter had one season at the stud in England, when he sired Orme and Goldfinch, and then the Duke of Westminster parted with him to a foreign buyer, and came in for endless abuse in consequence. Orme, however, carried on the male line and gave us Flying Fox, and the lastnamed is almost certain to perpetuate his species after the fashion of his immediate male ancestors. Flying Fox, by the way, was one result of Orme's second season at the stud. Orme himself, his sire Ormonde, and his grandsire Bend Or having all been sired in the first season of their restrictive sires."

Urica, March 8—Before the tenesee A. C. in this city last night Dal. Hawkins of California, defeated Percy McIniyre of New York in the twenty-fifth round of a fisce battle. Tim Hurst was referee, Hawkins was the cleverer of the two and landed far more blows. His work was encellent but McIniyre was in wonderful condition and could not have been knocked out in fifty rounds. Twice he was floored by hard blows on the head, but he came up smiling and ready for more. Hawkins was the favorite at two tone. When Referee Hurst gave the decision to him it met with general approval. Hawkins fought for the decision thromshout, saving himself for a battle on the 16th of this month.

News of the Wheelmen.

An application for membership was received resterday by the National Cycling Association from the Associated Cycling Clubs of Chicago. This organization is even more comprehensive in its character than the corresponding body in New York and the clubs in its ranks include practically all that promote race meets about Chicago. It has been questioned recently by Chicago. It has been questioned recently by some formerly interested in the L. A. W. racing board whether or not the N. C. A. would succeed in winning the amaieurs and clubs to its standard. The fact is that now the representatives of clubs are in a majority among the offlers of the N. C. A. and the number of clubs becoming members is increasing so rapidly that the professionals and track owners and promoters who originated the organization are no longer Carts. Whenever the clubs choose to combine they will have enough votes to control affairs. This is a situation that a apti to make the officials very careful and one that affords a splendid outlook for the season

Odds and Ends of Sport.

The members of the defunct Staten Island Cricket Club other than the grifers have practically completed arrangements for the use of the ground at Livingston the year. The Livingston Field Club is in course of organization, but permanent others will not be elected until the early part of April. In the meanwhile every preparation is being made for a successful season. The club has peined the Metropolitan District Oricket League, and the team has been strengthened so that the chimppoship of New York is not a remote possibility. Tenn's and baseball will receive attention sein the past and its expected that with business-like and economical management the club will prove a success.
